

LUKE SEYMOUR

Luke Seymour is a first-year graduate student at The Catholic University of America (MArch) and recent graduate of Benedictine College (B.A. Architecture). From the time he was very young he has been fascinated with building things, and when he was in first grade, he had the opportunity of living for a year just outside of Paris, France for his father's work. This experience shaped him greatly, instilling a love of and appreciation for travel, good food, and truly beautiful art and architecture.

Luke began seriously considering architecture as a career in high school when he became enamored with the great Gothic cathedrals of France. His passion for Gothic and ecclesiastical architecture soon led him to take an interest in classicism in general, and after much consideration, Luke decided to attend Benedictine College's budding classical architecture program for his undergraduate studies, as he believed that this program best married his great loves of architecture and faith. Luke also interned for two summers with William Heyer Architect, where he learned many valuable insights into the practical world of designing churches.

Luke is expected to graduate from The Catholic University of America with his M. Arch in Spring of 2025. He currently resides in Washington, DC with his wife, Bridget, and baby daughter, Marie Therese.