Piper Schaberg is a contemporary painter from Charleston, SC and currently lives in San Diego, California. She has studied fine art at both The Florence Academy of Art, NJ, and Grand Central Atelier, NY. Her background focused on the atmospheric and tonal applications of observational figure drawing and painting, combined with an emphasis on anatomy and form. Her most influential experiences were studying and copying masterworks at various galleries and museums in Paris, including The Louvre, Musée d'Orsay, and The Musée Rodin. Piper's work consists primarily of figurative oil paintings, which explore the nature of visual translation and are used as a means of excavating parts of herself. She currently teaches privately and in workshops throughout the US and Europe.
