

MICHAEL MADSEN

@michael.f.madsen

While Michael Madsen was raised in Sioux City, Iowa, his travels have taken him far and wide. He spent two semesters in Rome sketching churches, palaces, and piazzas. In Spain, he participated in the International Summer School of Traditional Architecture and Urbanism in Seville, organized by the Premio Rafael Manzano Martos. This opportunity expanded his knowledge of Spanish architecture and urbanism and continues to influence his design work at Michael G. Imber Architects.

Michael is a graduate of Iowa State with a Bachelor of Architecture degree and holds a Master's of Architectural Design in Urbanism from the University of Notre Dame. His previous work experience includes measuring historic buildings for adaptive reuse projects in Sioux City and working for a firm in South Bend where he developed his hand drafting skills and an interest in Catholic church architecture. At MGIA, he is currently working on three Catholic church projects – in Arkansas, North Carolina, and Florida. Michael is also a classically trained organist who continues to study at Trinity University in San Antonio and offers his talents at Masses as often as he can.
